Claims 11-13 stand withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b), as being drawn to a nonelected invention, there being no allowable generic or linking claim.

Applicant timely traversed the restriction (election) requirement in Paper No. 9.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 7, 10, 17 and 18 stand, and newly filed 22 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Levine et al. (V), for reasons of record set forth in Papers Nos. 10 and 071904, mailed 29 January 2003 and 22 July 2004, respectively.

In the amendment filed 24 November 2004, at the paragraph bridging pages 5 and 6, Applicants argue that HIV is not considered the direct etiology of the lymphoma in question. However, the lymphoma is associated with HIV, and as noted on the record previously is at least indirectly caused by it in the patients studied in Levine et al., whatever the mechanism. Furthermore, the patients treated with bleomycin in the methods of Levine et al. were infected with HIV, and thus inherently would have had the HIV replication treated by the administration of bleomycin. Although Applicants argue at page 6, first full paragraph, that reduction of the viral replication rate is not taught by Levine et al., again such would have occurred inherently in the bleomycin treatment disclosed by Levine et al. That another drug was used for this purpose does not argue against the inherency of the teachings of Levine et al.
